DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The phrase "complementarity positioned" (cl 1, ln 7) is idiomatically incorrect.

Clarification and/or correction is required.

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 07172959 in view of Leary (USPN 2849752). In regard to claim 1, JP 07172959 teaches molding footprint tiles (abstract; figs 1-2)--as a note, footprint, as defined by the instant specification as pg 2, is any various shape; rolling tile base to a predetermined uniform thickness (abstract; figs 1-2); imprinting by using a plate or roller with a plurality of convex footprints and exerting pressure upon the rolled tile base forming a plurality of concave footprint impressions into the tile base (abstract; figs 1-2); cutting the tile base into individual tiles (abstract; figs 1-2); and drying the imprinted tile (abstract; figs 1-2)--as a note such is inherent with the process in order to form a useable product. However, JP 07172959 does not teach cutting by utilizing a plate or roller with a plurality of blades complementarity positioned to the plurality of concave footprint impressions and exerting pressure upon the rolled tile base forming individual footprint tiles. Leary teaches embossing upon a base material (fig 1); and cutting with a plate the embossed base material into individual tiles. JP 07172959 and Leary are combinable because they are analogous with respect to forming a design onto a continuous base material and forming tiles. Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the cutting plate of Leary in the process of JP 07172959 in order to facilitate the production of individual tiles. In regard to claims 2-6, JP 07172959 teaches applying a coating on the individual footprint tiles (fig 2, step II); and using a tile base of plastic composite (title; abstract; and figs 1-2)--it should be noted that the composition is extruded. However, JP 07172959 does not teach using impressions of animal footprints; using an impression from one of the claimed animals; and coating a glaze on the individual tiles. In regard to using impressions of animal footprints, such is a mere obvious matter of choice dependent on the desired final product and of little patentable consequence to the claimed process since it is not a manipulative feature or step of the claimed process. Further, animal footprint tiles are well-known in the tile art. Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to imprint animal footprints in the tiles of JP 07172959 instead of geometric shapes in order to diversify the products of JP 07172959. In regard to using an impression from one of the claimed animals, such is a mere obvious matter of choice dependent on the desired final product and of little patentable consequence to the claimed process since it is not a manipulative feature or step of the claimed process. Further, footprint tiles of the claimed animals are well-known in the tile art. Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to imprint footprints of one of the claimed animals in the tiles of JP 07172959 instead of geometric shapes in order to diversify the products of JP 07172959. In regard to coating a glaze on the individual tiles, such is well-known in the tile art and ceramic art. Thus, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to applying a coating of glaze onto the tiles of JP 07172959 in order to provide protection.

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Wood (DES 383473 teaches a human footprint mold for a walkway.
